NRRTS Goes International

The National Registry of Rehabilitation Technology Suppliers (NRRTS) has announced that it will be changing its name to the International Registry of Rehabilitation Technology Suppliers (iNRRTS) effective immediately. The new name reflects the organization’s recent expansion and commitment to serving the global community of Rehabilitation Technology Suppliers.

“The additions of Canadian and Australian suppliers to the Registry, has made it clear to us that the need for quality Complex Rehabilitation Technology does not stop at a geographical boundary,” said Carey Britton, ATP/SMS, CRTS®, President of NRRTS. “We are excited to announce our new trade names, iNRRTS and International Registry of Rehabilitation Technology Suppliers, which reflects our commitment to advancing the field of Complex Rehab Technology (CRT) globally. We believe that iNRRTS will help us to be recognized for promoting the highest standards of professionalism, ethics, and service delivery for the benefit of people with disabilities everywhere.”

“During the first quarter of 2024, we will be updating our graphic identity and branding to reflect our new name,” said Andrea Madsen, ATP, Executive Director of NRRTS. “We will be sharing new graphics and branding identity with all of our Registrants, Friends of NRRTS, and supporters so they, too, can be part of our international growth. Please continue to visit our website at NRRTS.ORG.”

“NRRTS has been a trusted resource for complex rehab technology suppliers in the United States for over three decades,” said Britton. “As the industry has evolved and become more global, we recognized the need to expand our reach and better serve our members around the world. The new name reflects our commitment to that mission.”

Founded in 1992, the International Registry of Rehabilitation Technology Suppliers (iNRRTS) is a non-profit organization dedicated to promoting excellence in the provision of complex rehab technology. The organization provides education, advocacy, and networking opportunities for its members, who are required to meet rigorous standards of practice and adhere to a strict code of ethics.

iNRRTS is the only CRT Association dedicated to the professionals supplying complex rehab technology.
