iNRRTS Releases CRT Supplier Certificate Program

The International Registry of Rehabilitation Technology Suppliers (iNRRTS) has released the first level of the new CRT Supplier Certificate program, a comprehensive education program dedicated to Suppliers of Complex Rehabilitation Technology (CRT).

The program consists of three levels: Level I - Foundational Knowledge of Complex Rehab Technology; Level II - Expanded CRT Content and Specialized Learning; Level III - Practical Demonstration and Skills Assessment where CRT students meet with experienced suppliers.

Andrea Madsen, ATP, Executive Director of iNRRTS says, "Providing CRT is extremely difficult and requires practical experience and knowledge in many different areas. When done correctly, providing CRT gives life-changing independence and freedom to those who need and deserve it. Providing CRT incorrectly can cause a great deal of harm and unneeded cost. This program has been carefully designed to make certain that this necessary knowledge has been captured and is presented with online, interactive modules. There are tremendous benefits for everyone including CRT Suppliers, employers, and most of all, our Clients."

Weesie Walker, ATP/SMS, spearheaded the creation of the program. "For more than three years, subject matter experts have worked hard to make sure that a standard of excellence exists focused solely on the provision of CRT." she says. "Broad acceptance of this program can and will improve RTS performance and outcomes for our clients."

Visit the iNRRTS website at NRRTS.org and access the CRT Supplier Certificate Program portal. There you can learn more about the program and register to take the courses.

Level I is available now and consists of 10 courses. Levels II and III will be available soon.

Founded in 1992, the International Registry of Rehabilitation Technology Suppliers (iNRRTS) is a non-profit organization dedicated to promoting excellence in the provision of complex rehab technology. The organization provides education, advocacy, and networking opportunities for its Registrants, who are required to meet rigorous standards of practice and adhere to a strict code of ethics.

iNRRTS is the only CRT Association dedicated to the professionals supplying complex rehab technology.
